

Can you picture TWO Exxon Valdez Disasters in the heart of the Amazon rainforest?

ChevronTexaco can ...

Texaco's Deadly Operations in the Ecuadorian Amazon

Between 1971 and 1991, oil spills and toxic releases equivalent to 2 Exxon Valdez disasters contaminated the land and water in the Ecuadorian Amazon, one of the most fragile places on earth. This destruction was caused by Texaco, now ChevronTexaco.

In addition to the oil spills, Texaco simply dumped toxic wastes from its operations into the pristine rivers, forest streams and wetlands, ignoring industry standards.

As a result of the company's reckless operations, 2.5 million acres of rainforest were lost. Local indigenous communities and campesinos continue to suffer an exploding health crisis. In some villages near polluted water sources, the rate of cancer is 1,000 times higher than the historical norm.

Communities want ChevronTexaco to CLEAN UP, PAY UP and NEVER COME BACK to Ecuador! ChevronTexaco needs to be held accountable for its reckless and deadly operations!

Get involved in the International ChevronToxico Campaign.

Help Amazon Watch pressure ChevronTexaco by sending the attached postcard to the CEO, David O'Reilly TODAY.

Spread the word: when you buy ChevronTexaco products, you're getting Amazon destruction for free.

For more information, visit:

www.chevrontoxico.org
or www.amazonwatch.org

Contact Amazon Watch
at 510-419-0617
or 310-456-9158

Chevron xico

PEOPLE ALL OVER THE WORLD ARE SAYING ...

CLEAN UP! PAY UP!

